Aloha,

This year caps the most productive five years in the history of the Center on Disability Studies (CDS) at the University of Hawai‘i. We have produced a record number of trainees (57), administered more projects (46) than ever before, and created 80 new products for serving persons with disabilities. Although our activities continue to be primarily concentrated in education and early intervention, the percentage of activities related to health and community living has increased dramatically.

In 2008, the CDS was successful in generating $33.37 for every dollar of core funding we receive from the Administration on Developmental Disabilities. This leveraged funding brought over $17,000,000 to the University and the State of Hawai‘i. Additionally, CDS events such as the International Forum and Pac Rim Conference attracted more than 1,000 visitors to Honolulu, further demonstrating the contribution that the CDS makes to the economy of the State.

As we look forward to 2008-2009 and face uncertain economic times and new challenges, together let us recommit to the CDS mission: To promote diverse abilities across the lifespan through interdisciplinary training, research, and service. The CDS will continue to lead the way in its effort to support individuals with disabilities by advocating for self-determination, building capacity, changing systems, creating partnerships, celebrating diversity, championing inclusion, empowering abilities, nurturing collaboration, promoting learning, and supporting families.

I am grateful for the support of each member of our faculty and staff and all our partners throughout the community. We look forward with great excitement and enthusiasm to the work we can together accomplish in the future.

Mahalo,

Robert A. Stodden, PhD
Director

November 2008
The Center on Disability Studies

The Center on Disability Studies (CDS) at the University of Hawai‘i is a Center of Excellence in Education, Research, and Service. The CDS is committed to its mission to promote diverse abilities across the lifespan through interdisciplinary training, research, and service. As a research unit within the College of Education, the CDS receives core funding from the Federal Administration on Developmental Disabilities.

Guiding Principles

The following guiding principles direct the activities of the CDS as it seeks to leverage funding.

- Advocating for self-determination
- Building capacity
- Changing systems
- Creating partnerships
- Celebrating diversity
- Championing inclusion
- Empowering abilities
- Nurturing collaboration
- Promoting learning
- Supporting families
Interdisciplinary Disability and Diversity Studies

The Interdisciplinary Certificate in Disability and Diversity Studies is a 15 credit graduate level program approved by the University of Hawai‘i’s Board of Regents. The certificate program offers students in the masters and doctoral programs in disciplines such as education, social work, psychology, public health, nursing, law, medicine, and political science, an interdisciplinary approach to disability and diversity studies.

An International Journal

The CDS publishes the Review of Disability Studies: An International Journal, to provide a venue for the sharing of scholarly writings related to disability studies. This publication addresses issues of concern to persons with disabilities around the world.

Partnerships

The CDS works in partnership with the university, the community, and global organizations to enhance opportunities for persons with disabilities in the arts and recreation, community living, early intervention, education, employment, mental health, postsecondary education, special health needs, and transition.
International Forum: Securing the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Discussion on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, an international treaty that identifies the rights of persons with disabilities, as well as the obligations on states that are parties to the Convention to promote, protect, and ensure those rights.

Celebration!
Two Decades of Making a Difference

Pacific Rim International Conference on Disabilities 2008

- Presented over 200 presentations and breakout sessions
- Displayed over 70 poster sessions
- Inaugurated the First Annual International Forum on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities
- Featured speakers from over 20 regional areas and countries including New Zealand, the EU, Tunisia, Iraq, Egypt, and Mongolia.
- Showcased the Pacific Rim Fashion Show
- Featured ten keynote speakers, ten noted speakers and several specially themed workshops
- Collaborated with several local and regional agencies in specially themed seminars and workshops.
- Provided over 90 local and regional scholarships
Implemented strategic marketing and outreach initiatives thereby increasing our attendance to over 1150 participants

Cultivated new sponsorships including Xerox, HMSA, Gallaudet University, and Servco

Featured over 35 exhibitors from the diverse field of disabilities

Presented new topic areas including disability rights, hidden disabilities, disaster preparation, the arts and indigenous issues.

Provided spaces of deeper learning and collaboration

Captured 25% new participants

Implemented a sustainable strategy for the conference to become self-sustaining
The Administration on Developmental Disabilities funds three agencies in Hawai‘i to support self-determination and community inclusion of people with developmental disabilities. These agencies and their roles are as follows.

Hawai‘i Disability Rights Center
Protection and advocacy

State Council on Developmental Disabilities
Advocacy and policy development

Center on Disability Studies
Education, training, and research

Additionally, the three agencies work together on a number of collaborative projects which include:

- 360 Family Support Project, creating a one-stop center where no door is the wrong door.
- “My Voice, My Choice” supporting the development of youth self-advocates
- Implementing Olmstead, supporting people with autism, and transition.
CDS Advisory Councils

The CDS has two external councils to create community and university partnerships to assure that programs and services are responsive to national initiatives, priorities of advocacy groups and state agencies, and the university’s academic program objectives.

The Community Advisory Council (CAC) is composed of persons with disabilities, family members of persons with disabilities, and representatives of key community agencies. The CAC meets at least quarterly to review the work of the CDS, and provide input for strategic planning and agenda setting. Research on evidence-based practices is also shared with members of the CAC during these sessions.

The University Coordinating Council (UCC) is an internal university partnership that assures CDS programs are responsive to national initiatives and university’s academic program objectives. UCC membership consists of representatives from departments, colleges, and programs at the University of Hawai‘i at Manoa, which interface with training and research activities focused upon persons with disabilities and their families. The UCC meets quarterly and supports the recruitment for and expansion of the Interdisciplinary Certificate in Disability and Diversity Studies.
